LATAM unveils A321XLR cabins with private suites and 4K screens

The upcoming A321XLR aircraft will feature private, fully lie-flat Business Class suites

LATAM Airlines Group has unveiled the cabin interiors of its upcoming A321XLR aircraft, bringing a new premium long-haul experience to its single-aisle fleet beginning in March 2027.

The aircraft will feature private, fully lie-flat Business Class suites, 4K entertainment screens at every seat and upgraded Economy seating, bringing amenities traditionally associated with larger, widebody aircraft to a single-aisle jet.

Highlights of the new cabin experience include:

- Private Premium Business suites: 12 fully lie-flat suites with privacy doors, direct aisle access, wireless charging and 19-inch 4K OLED screens. LATAM will be the first South American airline to offer this type of Premium Business cabin on the A321XLR.
- 4K entertainment at every seat: For the first time in LATAM's single-aisle fleet, every Economy seat will feature a personal 13-inch 4K OLED screen, alongside Bluetooth connectivity and USB-C charging.
- Enhanced Economy comfort: 36 seats with extra legroom, greater recline and footrests.
- Next-generation entertainment and connectivity: A redesigned entertainment system featuring more than 2,300 hours of content, personalized viewing features and enhanced onboard Wi-Fi.

With more than 10 A321XLR aircraft planned, the new fleet will also allow LATAM to explore additional long-haul routes and strengthen international connectivity.
