United's black and silver service trays were created to prevent slips and spills

New full- and half-size service trays designed and manufactured by Galileo Watermark are now flying on United Airlines. The ABS and polycarbonate chrome trays are lightweight - more than 800 grams lighter than the airline's previous versions - and have a stainless steel-like finish that complements the Polaris cabin environment. The trays were developed to reduce the risk of spills on board with a non-slip surface and easy-handling design.
