DFMi announced this morning via e-mail some of the disaster relief efforts it has helped its customers contribute to in the fight against COVID-19. The premiere specialty sales and marketing company for the travel and transportation industry, which has been serving the international market since 1988, has worked with several of its customers to sell excess airline inventory to disaster relief foodservice companies. These efforts successfully contributed to the feeding of Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) disaster relief with schools and elderly groups.

"As we all continue to work through these uncertain times, DFMi is encouraged to see the airlines adding more flights and passenger counts continue to increase each day," said Chief Executive Officer Graham Felton. "We are looking forward to a much quicker turnaround than originally projected. We are eager and ready to serve Clean Eats Delivered To Your Seat."
