

Turkish Airlines to offer free, unlimited inflight messaging

Bilal Ekşi, CEO Turkish Airlines

Turkish Airlines announced that it will offer free, unlimited messaging services to passengers on international flights where internet access is available.

Turkish Airlines CEO Bilal Ekşi stated in an April 7 release: “We are adding another innovative development to the countless improvements we made for Türkiye’s aviation sector as the national flag carrier. By combining our innovative approach with customer satisfaction, we are ensuring our passengers will be able to freely message their loved ones above the clouds, staying in contact with them without any limits.”

“The limitless messaging service is complimentary to all Miles&Smiles members, and non-members will also be able to use the service upon completing the Miles&Smiles membership form available before or during the flight. Moreover; Miles&Smiles Classic Plus, Elite and Elite Plus members will also benefit from enhanced free internet packages,” the release said.

WhatsApp, Messenger, iMessage and other apps are compatible with the service. The service will launch on Turkish Airlines aircraft. Internet access will be provided by Turk Telekom with plans to extend to all aircraft with an internet connection.
