

American ends inflight magazine

American Airlines announced yesterday it will retire its inflight magazine American Way at the end of June.

American has published the magazine since 1966. “However, thanks to free inflight entertainment, customers will have plenty of entertaining options to tap into during their journeys,” said a release from the airline.

While the last issue of American Way, published by global travel media company Ink, will be this month the airline says it plans to introduce new inflight offerings “to inspire the wanderlust and provide even more ways to connect with family and friends while flying at 35,000 feet.”