Xejet, based in Lagos, Nigeria has decided to acquire entertainment systems with a wide range of advanced features. Flymingo Box solution has been welcomed by the airline. The solution introduces touchpoints to offer passengers an extensive digital experience.

The integrated portable wireless device optimizes the in-flight experience in the aircraft cabin. Connected on their personal electronic devices, passengers can access for free, high-quality content in different languages, including films, TV shows, musical playlists, games and podcasts tailored to the airline's requirements. One Flymingo Box can provide fast streaming to a whole single-aisle aircraft, which is a key requirement of the airline.

In addition, Flymingo Box offers new crew features. The Crew App simplifies operations related to passenger In-Flight Entertainment (IFE) services and optimizes onboard efficiencies. With the use of a tablet, the Xejet crew can monitor the IFE system and, in a few clicks, manage Wi-Fi connections, box battery life or streaming deactivation during announcements.

"We are very satisfied with this collaboration on our existing ERJ 145 aircraft, as we were looking for an upgraded passenger dedicated solution. Our agile, startup business model requires experienced technology partners", says Emmanuel Iza, CEO of Xejet, in today's announcement. "Considering the size of the aircraft we operate; we want our passengers to benefit from the same personalized service they can experience on a private jet. Flymingo Box supports our development across the continent, a growing market where we must be operational and innovative to respond to new opportunities."

"Xejet's trust in Moment highlights the relevance of our solutions and this new partnership supports our expansion around the world," says Tanguy Morel, CEO and co-founder of Moment. "Africa is a promising market, yet full of challenges with each airline having its specifics. The great strength of Flymingo Box is its ability to adapt to all infrastructure. Its agile technology is easily integrated into all aircraft and allows airlines to select only the content they want for an enriching experience at an affordable price.”
