Linstol will operate all headset activities under the partnership

Linstol announced it has entered into an agreement with Phitek/Amphenol to operate all headset related activities under license from the New Zealand-based inflight electronic parts supplier.

The combination of Phitek engineering and unique product characteristics alongside Linstol's production capabilities, supply chain proficiency and customer service will significantly improve the overall passenger experience and ensure satisfaction, according to the release.

"We are excited to be a leader in the industry and continue to raise the bar for our airline partners," said Mark Russell, Chief Executive Officer at Linstol. He added, "Our team is pleased to add the Phitek brand to the Linstol portfolio and is committed to driving the technology and engineering that has made the Phitek brand a benchmark product."

Aaron Gough, General Manager at Amphenol Phitek, said: "Linstol's market leadership within the aviation industry combined with Amphenol Phitek's historical and ongoing development of high performance engineered audio products will provide airlines a full suite of audio solutions now and into the future."
