

STG Aerospace announces appointment of a new CEO

STG Aerospace announced last week the appointment of Grant Bennett to the role of Chief Executive Officer. He will guide the company to develop its business to meet existing and new market demands.

Bennett has 30 years' experience in manufacturing, serving such diverse markets as consumer electronics, defense, medical, automotive and military and commercial aerospace.

He will move into his new position on January 1, 2021. "I am excited by the new challenge this brings, humbled to be offered this most significant role by our shareholders and grateful for the exceptional team around me that has taught me so much and supported my STG journey so far," said Bennett.

"2020 has been a year of more change at STG, some planned for, but much of it out of necessity as we wrestled to respond quickly whilst the world began to buckle under the pandemic. I am absolutely certain that our simple approach of keep all our people safe and maintain business continuity and then doing everything we could to ensure those two things, meant we were able to keep both our UK and US sites operational throughout the year and achieve on time supply to all our customers," he continued.

"Through it all, STG Aerospace has remained a stable and secure organization. A business that will remain industry leaders and trusted partners to all our customers and suppliers for many, many years to come."
