The unisex sets feature hints of color and other unexpected design elements

Guests in EVA Air's Royal Laurel and Premium Laurel classes will receive exclusive unisex sleepwear sets designed by Jason Wu and made possible by Buzz.

Wu created the heathered jersey sets with detailed design elements such as a triple-snap rollover collar and pops of color, a signature mark in Wu's runway work. The Jason Wu for EVA Air collection launched on board at the end of December and will run until late January.

David Chen, Senior Vice-President at EVA Air, commented on the partnership in a statement: "As Taiwan's premiere airline, we are proud to partner with world-renowned luxury designer Jason Wu. Together, we will deliver the ultimate in style and comfort for EVA Business Class passengers."

"As a jet setter myself, one of the most important criteria for my travel is comfort," Wu also noted. "This collaboration was a great opportunity for me to marry form and function to address something that would improve the experience of the EVA passenger."
