The right blanket, pillow or amenity can elevate the journey—passengers feel it, even if they do not realize the effort behind it. At WTCE 2026, Plane Talking Products (PTP) will spotlight the thought, craft and creativity behind every detail. Its latest innovations across dining, sleeping and well-being will be on display in a gallery format at booth 4C70.

The booth Gallery, themed “The art of innovation,” demonstrates how creativity, materials science and aviation expertise combine to turn concepts into airline-ready solutions.

“Turning ideas into reality is our craft. Inspired design may spark a concept, but expert craftsmanship brings it to life, and this is where Plane Talking Products is a driving force in the industry,” Alison Wells, CEO of Plane Talking Products, tells PAX International.

Leading the display is “The art of layers,” where PTP’s tableware specialists translate modern restaurant-style dining concepts into practical inflight products. The collection pairs refined aesthetics paired with technical durability, ensuring each piece meets operational demands while elevating onboard meals.

At WTCE booth 4C70, Plane Talking Products' Gallery display, "The art of innovation," will highlight how creativity, materials science and aviation expertise come together to create onboard solutions

In "The art of texture," PTP highlights advancements in inflight bedding. From temperature-regulating quilts to tech materials that reduce jet lag, PTP's textile innovations aim to deliver comfort across all cabin classes. Premium duvets, upgraded Economy blankets and differentiated fabrics show how thoughtful material choices can enhance rest throughout the journey.

"Our advanced materials and manufacturing methods keep us ahead in emerging trends in inflight bedding," says Wells. "We have the right product for every class, every journey and every passenger."

Well-being also takes center stage with "The art of self-care," where PTP has introduced a new K-Beauty range created to offer soothing skincare moments onboard.

Sustainability is a key pillar. With a Platinum EcoVadis rating, the company prioritizes responsible sourcing, circular design principles and reduced environmental impact, "a promise reflected in every project we deliver," says Wells.

"I am thrilled for the industry to see what we are unveiling this year at WTCE booth 4C70," she adds. "The PTP team has worked tirelessly to bring together the very best in onboard products—combining cutting-edge innovation, emerging trends and genuine inflight expertise."

For airlines visiting the Gallery, the message is clear: when thoughtful design meets practical aviation know-how, even the smallest onboard details can leave a lasting impression.
