

Flying Food Group expands Hawaii operations with Maui catering facility

FFG's OGG facility completes its presence across Hawaii's four major islands and becomes its 14th U.S. inflight catering location

Flying Food Group (FFG) tells PAX International today it has officially launched a new inflight catering facility at Kahului Airport (OGG), located on the northern edge of the land bridge between Haleakala and the West Maui Mountain Range on the island of Maui, further strengthening its operational footprint across the Hawaiian Islands.

The OGG facility extends FFG's presence across all four of Hawaii's major islands and marks the 14th inflight catering facility in FFG's U.S. network, reinforcing the company's commitment to supporting airline partners with reliable, high-quality catering services in key markets.

The facility's opening was marked by a traditional Hawaiian blessing ceremony, led by a Kahu, ahead of the official launch of operations. Operations commenced successfully with Hawaiian Airlines, part of Alaska Air Group, as the launch customer, supporting its 10 daily flights. The successful startup reflects extensive advance planning, disciplined operational execution and close coordination among the FFG, Hawaiian Airlines and Alaska Airlines teams.

“The opening of our Maui facility represents another important milestone in Flying Food Group’s continued growth in Hawaii,” Nicolas Rondeau, Executive Vice President of Sales & Marketing at FFG, tells PAX International. “Launching operations smoothly from day one demonstrates the strength of our operational teams and the close collaboration we maintain with our airline partners. We are proud to further strengthen our relationship with Hawaiian Airlines and Alaska Airlines and to deliver the high standards of service their operations demand.”

The successful launch reflects the dedication of the teams involved and FFG's focus on operational readiness, execution and long-term customer partnerships. The Maui operation further strengthens FFG’s ability to support airline customers throughout Hawaii with consistent service standards and operational reliability.