

Flying Food Group expands Orlando operations with Discover Airlines partnership

Discover Airlines aircraft in Orlando, supporting the carrier's long-haul flights to Munich and Frankfurt

Flying Food Group has expanded its Orlando operations through a new partnership with Discover Airlines, providing inflight catering for the carrier's services to Munich and Frankfurt.

The agreement covers 10 weekly flights departing from Orlando International Airport, with Flying Food Group delivering onboard meal services from its local facility. The company says the launch was executed seamlessly, enabling an immediate transition to full-service catering support.

The partnership marks a notable step in Flying Food Group's growth strategy at Orlando, one of the United States' busiest international gateways. By supporting Discover Airlines' long-haul operations, the caterer is further strengthening its footprint in the region while reinforcing its capabilities in delivering premium inflight dining experiences.

According to the company, the collaboration reflects strong operational alignment and builds on established relationships within the Lufthansa Group, of which Discover Airlines is a part.

Flying Food Group says its Orlando team is focused on delivering high-quality, innovative menu offerings tailored to enhance the passenger experience on transatlantic routes. The expansion also highlights the company's continued investment in operational efficiency and service consistency across its North American network.
