

Airport Dimensions names new commercial manager and creative director

Giovanni Pedaccini worked on the masterplan for Abu Dhabi International Airport

Global lounge and airport experience specialist, Airport Dimensions has named Giovanni Pedaccini as its new commercial manager and Andrew Mason as the new creative director.

Initially, Pedaccini worked for Mott MacDonald as an analyst, and then with Atkins as a planner, where he was involved with the latest Masterplan for Abu Dhabi International Airport.

Serving as regional creative director for the Asia Pacific Accreditation Cooperation (APAC) for Loyalty Services and more recently as global creative director, Andrew Mason has been a member of the team at Collinson for nearly 10 years. Mason worked across a variety of creative disciplines in Tokyo, London and Singapore.

Andrew Mason worked as a creative director on project in Tokyo, London and Singapore

“The Airport Dimensions team and I are delighted to welcome Giovanni and Andrew,” said Errol McGlothan, Managing Director at Airport Dimensions. “I strongly believe that their combined skills will bring a wealth of fresh ideas, which will be particularly useful to help us continue to thrive at this challenging time.”

Airport Dimensions owns a network of 24 lounges at major airports across the US and United Kingdom, including Atlanta, Dallas Fort Worth, Gatwick and Heathrow. In July 2020, it expanded its physical offering for travelers with the acquisition of UNGROUND Hospitality and the Sleep Lounge brand sleep 'n fly, and enhanced its digital experiences with the launch of e-commerce and relationship management platform Connecta.