

British Airways opens new Whispering Angel rosé bar

The airline has introduced a new rosé in its First cabin with Whispering Angel's big brother, Rock Angel British Airways has unveiled its exclusive Whispering Angel rosé bar at London Heathrow Terminal 5B.

"We are really excited to open the doors on our new original Whispering Angel bar, just in time for the start of the summer season," said Calum Laming, British Airways' Chief Customer Officer in a July 13 press release. "What's more, the opening coincides with the exciting news that customers now have the option to pre-order Whispering Angel across all short-haul flights, to take the experience with them, from the ground to the skies."

British Airways is the first airline to have a dedicated bar for Whispering Angel, giving passengers the opportunity to savour the famous rosé from Provence before their flights.

British Airways now also offers Rock Angel, the larger counterpart of Whispering Angel, in its First Class cabin. The bar opening is part of the airline's ongoing lounge refresh, which includes new furniture and layout changes. The Pale rosé, produced by the same winemakers, is available in other Club lounges.

The Château d'Esclans team added in the same release, "We are ecstatic to finally be able to share our beautiful Whispering Angel bar with British Airways' customers and bring a touch of glamour to Heathrow as the world's most glamorous rosé. We look forward to travellers being able to enjoy a delicious glass of Whispering Angel before they fly, in a space that really embodies the effortlessly chic nature of our brand.”
