

Emirates chooses SKYPRO for new pilot uniforms

The partnership will also focus on reducing Emirates' carbon footprint in the future through a sustainable uniform transition

Emirates announced that it has selected SKYPRO as the official uniform supplier for its pilots.

Through a rigorous selection process of assessing various partners, SKYPRO was chosen for its innovative approach to designing crew workwear, as well as its reliable raw materials, efficient logistic support, expert team and Dubai-based office.

SKYPRO has also committed to reducing Emirates' carbon footprint in the future by focusing on a Sustainable Uniform Transition. The partnership between Emirates and SKYPRO will provide pilots with more comfortable and efficient uniforms while also being environmentally responsible.

Through the collaboration, SKYPRO is also committed to reducing Emirates' carbon footprint by focusing on a sustainable uniform transition. The partnership between the two will provide pilots with more comfortable and efficient uniforms while also being environmentally responsible.

Jorge Pinto, SKYPRO's CEO, expressed the company's commitment to increased innovation to provide tailored solutions that prioritize efficiency and comfort. In a May 3 press release, Pinto said that "the added challenge with the Emirates project was to streamline their uniform operations to save time and money while ensuring their clothing met their exceptionally high standards of quality. We are happy that SKYPRO was able to handle this in a way that has pleased Emirates."
