

First look at AirJapan's products and services

AirJapan's aircraft will feature 324 economy class seats with a spacious 32-inch seat pitch offering ample leg and recline space

AirJapan, ANA Holdings' new medium-haul international airline, has unveiled select products and services to be introduced on its inaugural flights.

AirJapan is scheduled to begin operating flights in February 2024 to Southeast Asia and expand its network to other destinations across the continent.

In a March 9 press release, Hideki Mineguchi, President of AirJapan commented, "At AirJapan, we are dedicated to the passion of our passenger's pursuits, which inspires us to create inflight products and services to foster the innovative spirit of those flying with us," said "We hope the launch of these new amenities create a unique and outstanding travel experience for our passengers."

British design company Acumen Design Associates is responsible for the cabin interior and seats, the later of which have been manufactured by Safran.

The aircraft will be configured with 324 economy class seats made of premium Japanese faux leather and offer a generous seat pitch of 32 inches and recline feature. As an added convenience for smartphone and tablet users, Type-A and Type-C USB ports and tablet holders are also provided.
