LATAM Group opened the doors of “LATAM Lounge,” a renewed space for its preferred passengers and LATAM’s partner airline members at Comodoro Merino Benítez International Airport in Santiago.

The new space, at 4,000 square meters, replaces the old VIP lounge and will offer a more sustainable service with a Latin American influence.

“LATAM Lounge” is located in the new Terminal 2 of the Santiago airport, and it is available to all passengers with the LATAM benefits program in the Black Signature, Black and Platinum categories, for flights in Premium cabin, alliance customers and business partners, traveling on international flights, or making stopovers in Chile.

“Our decision making is always guided by our customers, and we continue to advance an experience where everyone can choose what is important for their trip. We have promoted changes and innovations in our new Lounge to create a space that highlights the best of our region and where there are options for everyone to enjoy their time as they see fit,” said Paulo Miranda Vice President of Customers for LATAM Airlines Group in this week’s announcement.

Eighty percent of the energy used to operate the LATAM Lounge is renewable

The lounge uses 80 percent renewable energy for its operation, has interactive games with educational themes surrounding recycling and conservation and waste reduction is encouraged through recycling and reuse. The new lounge will also compensate its carbon footprint through ecosystem conservation projects in the South America.
