

Lufthansa plans more long-haul flights out of MUC

The decision by Lufthansa German Airlines to station additional A350s at its Bavarian hub in Munich was welcomed this week by officials at the airport.

“Especially in the current crisis, this is an extremely important signal that promises an additional boost for our premium hub in Munich,” said Jost Lammers, CEO of Munich Airport. “With now 21 Airbus A350s, Lufthansa can offer even more long-haul flights at its Bavarian hub and thus further consolidate Munich’s excellent international links.”

At the start of the upcoming summer flight schedule, Lufthansa will serve two highly attractive long-haul destinations – San Diego and Rio de Janeiro – directly from Munich for the first time. Flights from MUC to Bangkok will also be offered again.
