

Premium Select cabin to fly on Delta routes to Hawaii

Hawaii represents the first domestic routes with the Delta Premium Select cabin

Beginning this winter, Delta Air Lines will launch its Premium Select cabin three daily nonstop routes to Hawaii – Atlanta to Maui, New York-JFK to Honolulu and Salt Lake City to Maui.

“We continue to see unparalleled demand for our premium products, so we’re giving our customers access to nearly 330,000 premium seats to Hawaii this winter,” said Joe Esposito, Senior Vice President- Network Planning, in today’s announcement. “Hawaii is a highly sought-after destination for families and adventurers alike, and we’re offering them more choice and comfort than ever before.”

Delta will offer direct daily flights to Maui from Atlanta when the new route launches Nov. 19. On Dec. 17, the airline will introduce new daily nonstop service from New York-JFK to Honolulu as well as returned daily frequency from Salt Lake City to Maui. In total, Delta will offer 19 daily nonstop flights to four Hawaiian destinations from seven U.S. cities this winter.

In Delta Premium Select, passengers have more leg room and a wider seat, deeper recline and an adjustable footrest and leg rest. They’ll also receive an upgraded amenity kit, noise-canceling headsets, a blanket made from recycled materials and memory-foam pillow to help them arrive rested and refreshed.

In the months ahead, Delta said it will continue to evolve the Delta Premium Select experience, with onboard enhancements designed with customers’ well-being in mind and personalized experiences that go beyond the seat. There will be a new dining experience, premium service touchpoints and amenity kits.

In addition to the domestic U.S. launch of Delta Premium Select, the product is currently flying on most transatlantic and transpacific flights.
