

SWISS introduces TWINT as payment method

Passenger on the SWISS app while waiting to board

Passengers travelling on Swiss International Air Lines (SWISS) can now pay for their flight tickets using Switzerland's TWINT payment app. The new payment method is available for SWISS tickets and for additional flight-related services, such as seat reservations or reserving an additional checked bag. It can be used on both the SWISS app and the SWISS website.

The TWINT option can be used by anyone registered to do so for any SWISS flight from Switzerland. TWINT users making their flight booking via the SWISS app will also need to have the latest SWISS app version installed.

"Adding TWINT as a further payment option marks another step in our ongoing endeavors to give our customers even more choice from their flight booking onwards, and to make their air travel experience as simple and as individual as possible," said Heike Birlenbach, Chief Commercial Officer, SWISS. "We've long been firmly committed to Swissness at SWISS, and will always work with partner Swiss companies wherever we can. So we're all the more delighted that our customers can now also buy their SWISS tickets using Switzerland's leading and popular payment app."

Adrian Plattner, Chief Sales Officer at TWINT also commented: "We're very pleased to embark on this new collaboration with SWISS. Our companies share the vision of offering our customers in Switzerland a top-class booking and payment product and an outstanding service. By teaming TWINT and SWISS, we're strengthening the user experience, and we're bringing Switzerland's leading airline together with its most popular payment system."