

Linstol to showcase 'Art of Delivery' and sustainability leadership at WTCE 2026

This is a special feature from the April 2026 WTCE Hamburg issue of PAX International on page 84.

Paula Wines, Creative Director, Linstol

Linstol will debut its latest collection, The Art of Delivery, at WTCE 2026—a showcase celebrating the craftsmanship behind every product's journey from concept to cabin. The collection emphasizes how onboard products are defined not just by final form, but by precision engineering, responsible sourcing, quality control and intentional design.

From audio technology to premium comfort solutions and responsibly designed amenities, every detail is curated to enhance the passenger experience while supporting airline operational efficiency and measurable sustainability goals.

"The Art of Delivery is about recognizing the expertise, care and craftsmanship that sits behind every product we create," says Paula Wines, Creative Director at Linstol. "For our airline partners, delivery is more than logistics. It is reliability, sustainability, performance and experience coming together seamlessly. This collection represents our commitment to the unseen journey behind every product."¹

Visitors to WTCE 2026 will see how Linstol combines innovation with artistry, highlighting both product design and the quiet moments of refinement, collaboration and craftsmanship that define exceptional solutions.

Linstol will debut The Art of Delivery at WTCE 2026, celebrating the craftsmanship behind every product's journey from concept to cabin

Platinum EcoVadis recognition

Linstol tells PAX International it has earned a Platinum rating in the 2026 EcoVadis sustainability assessment, scoring 86 percent and placing the company in the top 1 percent of more than 150,000 companies worldwide. This recognition underscores Linstol's leadership in responsible business practices, from environmental stewardship and ethical operations to sustainable sourcing.

"Achieving Platinum status from EcoVadis is a significant milestone for Linstol," says Steve Wickham, Global Head of ESG. "Sustainability is not a standalone initiative for us, it is embedded in how we design, source and deliver our products. This recognition reflects the dedication of our global teams and partners who are committed to driving meaningful, measurable impact across the aviation industry."

Steve Wickham, Global Head of ESG, Linstol

Offsetting plastic at WTCE 2026

Partnering with Plastic Bank, Linstol is offsetting the equivalent of 100 plastic bottles per WTCE attendee, preventing an estimated 365,000 bottles—more than 7,300 kilograms of plastic—from polluting oceans and coastlines.

“Sustainability must move beyond intention to measurable impact,” shares Wickham. “By partnering with Plastic Bank for WTCE 2026, we are not only preventing plastic waste from entering our oceans but also supporting ethical collection communities. It is about creating environmental progress while delivering social value and ensuring our actions are as meaningful as our commitments.”

Through its partnership with Plastic Bank, Linstol helps airlines cut down on virgin plastic while creating economic opportunities for coastal communities by turning collected plastic waste into a valuable resource