

ACS UK wins two tier-one airline contracts within months of reopening order book

ACS UK has secured two significant new contracts with tier-one global airlines

Aircraft interiors specialist, ACS UK, has secured two significant new contracts with tier-one global airlines, marking a strong return to market just months after reopening its order book.

Signalling strong market demand for its services, the agreements cover the design and manufacture of bespoke, customized monuments for wide-body aircraft. Each monument will be tailored to reflect the individual brand identities and values of the respective airlines. Deliveries are expected to begin in 2027.

Nigel McSorley, CEO of ACS UK, commented: "Securing these contracts so soon after reopening our order book is a clear endorsement of the quality, creativity, and reliability that ACS UK brings to the market. We are proud to be partnering with two leading global airlines to deliver bespoke monument solutions that elevate both passenger and crew experience while reflecting the unique character of each brand. It's an exciting milestone for the team and a positive sign of the momentum building across our business and the wider industry."

The contracts come against a backdrop of rising aircraft production.

Last year saw an increase in deliveries from both Boeing and Airbus compared with 2024, and further production growth is forecast across the major OEMs for 2026, ACS UK said in its February 11 press release. This trend is a positive signal for the wider aviation sector, and of the renewed demand for high-quality cabin interior solutions from suppliers such as ACS UK. ACS UK has been investing in its U.K.-based engineering and manufacturing facilities and working closely with OEMs and airlines to expand its offerable portfolio.

These developments put the company in a strong position to support the expected ramp-up in aircraft deliveries. ACS UK also recently confirmed its participation at Aircraft Interiors Expo (AIX) 2026 in Hamburg this April. The company said demand for meetings with customers and partners is already high, further reflecting the market's renewed confidence and interest in ACS UK's capabilities.

ACS UK will be exhibiting at Stand 7A01.
